What Is Adderall?

Adderall is an (central nervous system) CNS stimulant which belongs to a class of phenethylamines. Adderall is a brand name for a combined medication of amphetamine and dextroamphetamine.

It is used to treat ADHD, narcolepsy, and certain sleeping disorders, and helps you stay awake during the daytime. It should not be used to treat tiredness or to sleep in people who do not have a sleep disorder.

Stimulants are a habit-forming medicine, and using them on a daily basis for a longer period of time can make you dependable and addicted to this drug. Adderall comes in two forms – Immediate-release tablets and extended-release tablets.

It is a prescription stimulant approved by the FDA (food and drug administration) and comply with safe-to-use regulation.
