What Is Hydrocodone?

Hydrocodone is a prescription opioid analgesic used to treat moderate to severe pain. It is often combined with other medications such as acetaminophen to enhance pain relief. Hydrocodone works by binding to opioid receptors in the brain and spinal cord, reducing the perception of pain.

Because of its potency and risk of misuse, hydrocodone is classified as a Schedule II controlled substance in the United States, meaning it has accepted medical use but also a high potential for dependence if not used correctly.

Doctors prescribe hydrocodone only when non-opioid pain relievers are insufficient.
